The Moscow Times
30 YEARS
INDEPENDENT NEWS FROM RUSSIA

Russian Football Star Re-Creates Famous Album Covers in Quarantine

April 13, 2020

If The Beatles had released "Abbey Road" 40 years later... a.kerzhakov11 / Instagram

Football stars, they're just like us — they get bored during coronavirus lockdown, too.

Alexander Kerzhakov, a former striker for Zenit St. Petersburg and the top-scoring player in the history of Russian football, has used his time in quarantine to re-create some of his favorite iconic album covers.

Related article: Russia's 'Isolation Art' Takes the Internet By Storm

Joined by his family members, he's re-created famous covers from Queen, Oasis and The Beatles so far, with more likely to come as quarantine drags on.

Here's a look at the quarantine creations:

Hey 2020, are you Queen's smash hit "Bohemian Rhapsody"? Because you also have us questioning whether this is the real life or if it's just fantasy.

Thanks to Oasis, you, too, can feel like a rockstar by sitting around in your apartment.

Original url:
https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2020/04/13/russian-football-star-re-creates-famous-album-covers-in-quarantine-a69968