The Moscow Times
30 YEARS
INDEPENDENT NEWS FROM RUSSIA

Soldier Gets $20K for Brain Injury Caused by Hazing

By The Moscow Times

February 26, 2014

A military conscript who was severely beaten by a fellow soldier in an apparent hazing incident has been awarded 750,000 rubles ($20,000) by a court in the Chelyabinsk region.

The court said in a statement Tuesday that the recruit, Yevgeny Mikhailov, suffered an "open craniocerebral injury" in the beating, which occurred at barracks in the Urals town of Chebarkul in summer 2011.

Following the incident, Mikhailov was deemed unfit for service and discharged from the military. He has since been declared disabled.

The Russian military has long been plagued by systematic hazing, particularly of freshly inducted draftees, which is a tradition that dates back to the Soviet era.

Original url:
https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2014/02/26/soldier-gets-20k-for-brain-injury-caused-by-hazing-a325

00