

Bones in Finance Ministry

September 19, 2010

The  Moscow Times

A large stash of 100-year-old bones was discovered by workers renovating the Finance Ministry building on Birzhevaya Ploshchad in central Moscow, Interfax reported Sunday.

The skeletons probably belong to people buried in a church cemetery that was located on the site prior to construction of the building in the late 19th century, a law enforcement source told Interfax, without elaborating on the fate of the bones. ☒

(MT)

Original url: <https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2010/09/19/bones-in-finance-ministry-a1564>