

700,000 Questions for Putin

December 15, 2010

The  Moscow Times

Prime Minister Vladimir Putin is to hold his annual live conference call Thursday, with some 700,000 questions submitted by the public by e-mail, phone and text messages as of Wednesday, Interfax reported.

Complaints about housing problems are the most popular, accounting for 21 percent of the whole, RIA-Novosti said. Security matters make up 17.5 percent of the questions, and social welfare 12 percent. The conference call will air at noon and will be broadcast by Rossia-1 and Rossia-24 television, and Mayak, Vesti FM and Radio Rossii radio.

(MT)

Original url: <https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2010/12/15/700000-questions-for-putin-a3785>