

Japan Mulls Gazprom LNG

By The Moscow Times

January 17, 2011

The  Moscow Times

Japan's Agency for Natural Resources and Energy and Gazprom agreed to study options for exporting natural gas from Russia's Pacific coast, including creating a front-end engineering design this year for an LNG plant near Vladivostok, the companies said Monday in an e-mailed statement.

Gazprom now supplies Japan from the Sakhalin Energy venture, the country's only LNG facility, which is designed to meet about 7 percent of Japan's fuel imports.

Gazprom and Japan will also consider a project to compress gas in Vladivostok and jointly produce and transport gas chemicals. ☒

(Bloomberg)