

Alrosa Valued at $5.5 Billion Before IPO

By The Moscow Times

May 18, 2011

The  Moscow Times

Alrosa, the Russian diamond mining monopoly planning an initial public offering, may be worth about $5.5 billion, according to the valuation of a stake held in the company by Swedish fund Vostok Nafta Investment.

Vostok Nafta, manager of almost $700 million of mostly Russian assets, valued its shares in Alrosa at $20,000 each as of March 31, up 39 percent in three months, the investor said in a statement Wednesday. Alrosa has 272,726 outstanding shares, the producer's web site shows. Stock is now traded over-the-counter.

Alrosa plans to sell a 20 percent to 25 percent stake in an IPO in 2011, chief executive Fyodor Andreyev said in March. Analysts valued the company at $6 billion to $12 billion, he said.

Shareholders agreed last month to change Alrosa's legal form to a public company. The producer is recommending 1.83 billion rubles ($65 million) in dividends for 2010 and a stock split to reduce the nominal value, making the shares more accessible to retail investors.

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2011/05/18/alrosa-valued-at-55-billion-before-ipo-a7037>