State grain trader United Grain wants to invest in a grain terminal at the southern port of Taman that is now being designed, company spokesman Viktor Krupenin said.

The terminal would be capable of handling 8 million metric tons of grain a year, Krupenin said Sunday. The terminal is expected to open by 2017, he said.

Federal State Enterprise Rosmorport spokeswoman Irina Lobkova said the port would cost an estimated 82.7 billion rubles ($2.98 billion), comprising 32.1 billion from private industry and 50.6 billion rubles from the government.
