UTair Builds in Peru

By The Moscow Times

February 19, 2012

UTair aims to build Latin America's first helicopter maintenance center in Peru, state news agency Andina reported.

The company plans to invest $8 million in 10 hectares of land south of Lima, workshops, offices and a hangar to handle growing regional demand for Russian choppers, the Lima-based agency said last week, citing UTair Helicopter Services president Alexei Vinogradov.

UTair will also invest $50 million this year in new MI-171 helicopters for its Helisur unit, which supplies Peru's oil industry, according to Andina.
