Russia and Armenia have reached an agreement on natural gas prices, Armenian President Serzh Sargsyan said Wednesday following a meeting with his Russian counterpart, Vladimir Putin, Interfax reported.

"[We] discussed all opportunities for mutual cooperation, including prices for Russian gas. We found mutually acceptable approaches based on a realistic price for gas," Sargsyan said.

He added that Russian gas is vital for Armenia.

Sargsyan also said bilateral relations have been expanding, including ties in the military industrial complex.
