Moscow motorists driving to work one recent Friday morning were in for a shock.

Instead of coming up against bumper-to-bumper traffic on the way to work, they came across a man leisurely riding a shopping trolley across four lanes of traffic near a tunnel to the north of the city center.

The incident, caught on one driver's dashboard camera, took place at roughly 9 a.m. on Aug. 3 on Prospekt Mira, not far from the turning for Ulitsa Kosmonavtov. It was not immediately clear whether the laid-back trolley-rider suffered any injuries in the daring stunt.
