

Harvest at 38 Million Tons

By The Moscow Times

December 25, 2012

The  Moscow Times

Russia's wheat harvest this year totaled 38 million tons, the lowest in the past 10 years, and prices for grain, flour and cereals continue to rise, the Institute for Agricultural Market Studies said, Interfax reported.

Farmers harvested 56.2 million tons of wheat last year. Sources at the institute said the decrease happened primarily because less wheat had been harvested in the country's south and in Siberia.

Preliminary data indicate that the gross winter wheat harvest in the Southern and North Caucasus federal districts amounted to 14.5 million tons this year, versus 22.6 million tons last year.

In Siberia, there was a record-low harvest of spring wheat this year. Because of the drought, it was down almost 50 percent, at 5.4 million tons. (MT)

Related articles:

- Grain Harvest to Increase
- Farm Equipment Import Duties Soar
- Ministry Lists Regions for Farm Aid

Original url: <https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2012/12/25/harvest-at-38-million-tons-a20467>