

World Powers Seek Iran Nuke Talks in February

January 28, 2013

The  Moscow Times

BRUSSELS — World powers asked Iran to hold a new round of talks in February over its nuclear work, and they expressed disappointment over Tehran's reluctance to schedule negotiations.

A spokesman for EU foreign policy chief Catherine Ashton said Monday that Iran had not agreed to her proposal — issued on behalf of the United States, Russia, China, France, Britain and Germany — to meet at the end of January.

Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov said Monday that global powers and Iran should "stop behaving like little children" and set a date and a place for the talks.

"We believe the essence of our talks is far more important [than the site], and we hope that common sense will prevail and that we will stop behaving like little children," Lavrov said.

(Reuters)

Related articles:

- Clinton in Prague to Lobby for Nuke Plant Project
- Georgia Details Nuke Investigations
- Bushehr Reactor Shutdown Caused by Stray Bolts

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2013/01/28/world-powers-seek-iran-nuke-talks-in-february-a21027>