

Asia-Pacific Role Touted

By The Moscow Times

March 25, 2013

The  Moscow Times

The Asia-Pacific region accounted for 43 percent of Russia's arms exports in 2012, a deputy CEO of the state arms exporter Rosoboronexport, Viktor Komardin, told Interfax at the Lima-2013 exhibition on Tuesday, Interfax reported.

"We feel confident in the Asia-Pacific region," he said.

Komardin said that military equipment produced in Russia is "widespread in all the leading countries of the region except in Japan."

"Today Bangladesh, India, Indonesia, China, Malaysia and a number of other countries in the region are actively using Russian-made planes and helicopters, antiaircraft systems, naval military equipment, and land-based weapons and military equipment," he said.

He added that Russia has already established "long-term and fruitful" relationships with the majority of the Asia-Pacific countries and that it continues to improve those relations through various new forms of cooperation.

(MT)

Related articles:

- Rogozin Asks Seagal to Lobby for Arms Sales
- Russia Remains World's 2nd Leading Arms Exporter
- Iraq Says Baghdad, Moscow Intend to Fulfill \$4Bln Arms Deal

Original url: <https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2013/03/25/asia-pacific-role-touted-a22712>