Tennis star Maria Sharapova, 25, will launch her line of premium chewy candies in Moscow at the end of April, according to a statement issued Thursday by her company, Sugarpova.

High-end supermarket chain Azbuka Vkusa has been selected as the sales partner for Russia.

"I'm looking forward to the moment when Russia sees what we have made," the four-time grand slam winner said in the statement.

Sharapova started the candy company in August 2012. Her products are now available in the United States, Britain, Canada, Japan and Australia.
