Moscow Times publisher Ekaterina Son said Wednesday that she will be moving to RBK to lead its publishing house.

Son will replace Alexei Fyodorov, the current head of RBK publishing.

A graduate of Moscow State University's economic department, Son joined the Independent Media publishing house as finance manager for The Moscow Times in 1997, later moving to senior positions at various publications within the group before returning to The Moscow Times as publisher in 2008.

Son has not announced a departure date, and a replacement for her has not been named.

Son will be the third senior executive to leave Sanoma Independent Media to work for RBK, which is controlled by billionaire Mikhail Prokhorov's Onexim group.

The other two, Moscow Times founder Derk Sauer and former Sanoma Independent Media

CEO Yelena Myasnikova, earlier took senior positions at RBK.

RBK holding publishes the RBK Daily business newspaper and the RBK monthly magazine and runs RBK TV, a business television channel.
