The Moscow Times
30 YEARS
INDEPENDENT NEWS FROM RUSSIA

High-Speed Moscow Car Accident Goes Viral (Video)

By The Moscow Times

May 27, 2013

Caution: video contains Russian profanity. A video showing the driver reaching 180 kilometers per hour before crashing into a line of cars.

A video showing a driver reaching 180 kilometers per hour before crashing into a line of cars. Caution: Video contains Russian profanity.18+

A driver speeding on Moscow's Leningradsky Prospekt and then crashing his Subaru into cars standing in a traffic jam has gone viral online.

The speedometer shows the car speeding along at 180 kilometers per hour when the accident happened. Both the driver and his two male passengers can be heard swearing during the accident, which happened Friday. The video was uploaded onto YouTube on Monday and had clocked up about 600,000 views by midday Tuesday.

It was not clear whether the driver and his passengers, whose faces can be seen in the video, were detained by police.

Original url:
https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2013/05/27/high-speed-moscow-car-accident-goes-viral-video-a24410