

Metro Driver Dies After Electric Shock

By The Moscow Times

June 11, 2013

The  Moscow Times

A Moscow metro driver has died from an electric shock at Orekhovo station on the Green Line, a news report said Tuesday.

The 29-year-old was getting out of the train at the end of his shift when he accidentally made contact with a live wire, Interfax reported, citing a police source.

The incident occurred at about 3 a.m. Sunday morning.

An ambulance team arrived shortly after the incident, but were unable to resuscitate him.

Related articles:

- Moscow Metro Grinds to a Halt Again
- Head Electrician Axed Over Metro Fire
- Normal Service Resumes on Metro, 20 Still in Hospital

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2013/06/11/metro-driver-dies-after-electric-shock-a24859>