

Vodka Turns Man Into Russian Bruce Lee (Video)

By The Moscow Times

July 29, 2013

The  Moscow Times

A YouTube video showing an apparently intoxicated man attacking inanimate objects and the air.

A video going viral in Russia claims to show a man, said to have consumed large amounts of vodka, walking around trying to fight utility poles and invisible ninjas.

The video uploaded to YouTube shows the man performing "ninja-style" moves on ... well, thin air. With added music and sound effects, this viral video is a real gem and could be part of a Russian TV show.

Few details about the video, titled "Drunken Master" are available.

But, judging from the comments posted below the video, viewers are finding it hilarious.

Related articles:

- LGBT Organization Calls For Boycott of Russian Vodka
- Agency Refuses to Register Vodka Brand on 'Immorality' Grounds
- Illegal Vodka Production Booms as Legal Distillers Cut Back

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2013/07/29/vodka-turns-man-into-russian-bruce-lee-video-a26233>