The Moscow Times
30 YEARS
INDEPENDENT NEWS FROM RUSSIA

Photography Collective's Dreams of Another Russia (Photo Essay)

By Timothy Misir

November 20, 2013

An elk wanders close to the housing blocks in Moscow's southeast. (Lena Tsibizova, 2013)

The Moscow-based photography collective Troyka opened their first solo exhibition in the small hall of the Artplay Design Center on Saturday. The exhibition brings together 30 photographs and 3 videos culled from different series that they have worked on over the past few years.

The collective, which describes its work as ethnographical research, comprises the photographers Olga Rodina, Anastasia Soboleva and Lena Tsibizova. Here, they share some of their photographs with The Moscow Times.

Read more about the collective and their exhibition here.

Polina and her pet cat, Abram-Mys, Murmansk. (Lena Tsibizova, 2013)

Under the Kolsky bridge, Murmansk. (Lena Tsibizova, 2013)

A field in Nevezhkino, Penza region. (Anastasia Soboleva, 2013)

The wide expanse of a winter landscape in Tomsk. (Anastasia Soboleva, 2012)

A resident of Altynzhar village, Astrakhan region in traditional dress. (Olga Rodina, 2012)

A man gives his camel a break while traveling near Sarai-Batu, Astrakhan region. (Olga Rodina, 2012)

To view more work by the collective, please visit their website.

Original url:
https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2013/11/20/photography-collectives-dreams-of-another-russia-photo-essay-a29754