Outflow from Russia-focused investment funds surged to $88 million in the week ending Wednesday, up from just $11 million in the week prior, according to data from Emerging Portfolio Fund Research Global.

This increase continues a pattern of alternating positive and negative weeks for Russia-dedicated funds, a reflection of investors' caution in light of the unresolved crisis in Ukraine, according to a report by UralSib Capital.

Most of the outflow was from money leaving exchange-traded funds, while traditional funds continued a two-week growth streak with gains of $31 million.
