Alfa Bank Plans $500 Million Eurobond Float Despite Ukraine Tensions

By The Moscow Times

August 19, 2014

Russia's largest private bank Alfa Bank plans to issue subordinated eurobonds worth at least $500 million in September, the bank's chief managing director told journalists Tuesday.

"We want [to do this] in September ... but the question is how the situation will develop in September," Alfa Bank's Alexei Marei said at a news conference. "If there is a deal then it will be more than $500 million."
