

Putin: Russia Does Not Pose a Threat to Anyone

November 26, 2014

The  Moscow Times

President Vladimir Putin said Wednesday that Russia would safeguard its own security and that of its allies but posed a threat to no one.

"We pose no threat to anyone and do not intend to get involved in any geopolitical games or intrigues, let alone conflicts, no matter who tries to draw us into them or how they do so," Putin told a meeting with military chiefs in his state residence in the Black Sea resort of Sochi.

"At the same time, it is indispensable to securely safeguard the sovereignty and integrity of Russia and the security of our allies."
