A survey conducted by U.S. website BabyNameWizard.com among tens of thousands of its visitors has proven the sexiness of Russian names, putting two of them in the top 10.

The survey, whose results were published Monday, showed two lists of male and female names considered to be the "sexiest" or the "least sexy."

Natalya, one of the most widespread Russian names and a common nickname for Russian girls traveling abroad, took third place in the sexiest list between French-sounding Nicolette and Anais.

Dmitry was sixth for men's most attractive names. The least attractive men's name was the popular American nickname Bob.
