The Moscow Times
30 YEARS
INDEPENDENT NEWS FROM RUSSIA

One in Three Russians Knows Someone With a Disability (infographic)

By Alexandra Tyan

August 19, 2015

The outcry provoked by an incident last week in which supermodel Natalia Vodianova's sister, who has autism and cerebral palsy, was thrown out of a cafe in their native city of Nizhny Novgorod, has prompted a broader debate about people with disabilities in Russian society. Last fall, polling agency VTsIOM conducted a survey asking Russians their opinions about how people with disabilities should be treated.

Original url:
https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2015/08/19/one-in-three-russians-knows-someone-with-a-disability-infographic-a49047