

Kremlin Says Too Early For Possible Putin-Obama Meeting

September 24, 2015

President Vladimir Putin

The Kremlin said on Thursday it was too early to speak about a possible meeting between Russian President Vladimir Putin and U.S. President Barack Obama next week in New York, or topics for discussion.

Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov also told journalists on a conference call that there have been "certain agreements" made between Russia and Israel about coordinated military actions over Syria.

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2015/09/24/kremlin-says-too-early-for-possible-putin-obama-meeting-a49803>