In the Range Rover, investigators found a large bag containing a silencer, more than 30 rounds of 9-millimeter ammunition, a Kalashnikov automatic rifle, a traumatic weapon, handcuffs and Scotch tape, the statement said.

Russia's Interior Ministry has announced a reward of 1 million rubles ($16,124) for tips leading to the arrest of a businessman in the Moscow region city of Krasnogorsk who went on a killing spree Monday.

The whereabouts of Amiran Georgadze, who was added to a federal wanted list on Tuesday, are still unknown, the ministry said Tuesday in an online statement.

Georgadze on Monday afternoon reportedly gunned down two people — the first deputy mayor of the city of Krasnogorsk, Yuri Karaulov, and the head of the local electric company, Georgy Kotlyarenko.

A third person, a local resident, was killed while Georgadze and his driver were on the run, the Moscow region branch of the Investigative Committee said in an online statement.

During a raid of Georgadze's home later on Monday, investigators found a fourth body belonging to the shooter's business partner, Tristan Zakaidze, the TASS news agency reported, citing Investigative Committee spokesman Vladimir Markin.

The driver, Shota Elizbarashvili, turned himself in on Tuesday morning, bringing with him the vehicle that was used to flee the initial crime scene, the Investigative Committee said in an online statement.

In the Range Rover, investigators found a large bag containing a silencer, more than 30 rounds of 9-millimeter ammunition, a Kalashnikov automatic rifle, a traumatic weapon, handcuffs and Scotch tape, the statement said.

Georgadze had simultaneously fired at the officials with two weapons "like a professional gangster," Markin told LifeNews on Tuesday.

According to an unidentified source working in law enforcement, Georgadze, a local businessman working in construction, had earlier demanded $20 million dollars in "compensation" from some of the victims, the Interfax news agency reported.

Media on Monday reported Georgadze may have committed the murders as revenge for not being allocated government construction contracts.
