Finland Extradites Russian Computer Fraud Suspect to U.S.

By The Moscow Times

January 08, 2016

Finland said on Friday it had decided to extradite Russian citizen Maxim Senakh, accused of computer fraud and abuse, to the United States for trial.

The Nordic country detained Senakh in August at the request of U.S. federal authorities, in a move which Russia called illegal.

Senakh has been accused in the state of Minnesota of infecting computer servers with malware, resulting in criminal gains worth millions of dollars.

The Russian Foreign Ministry was not available for an immediate comment.
