Monster Hills

Monster Hills

Food theme park

When you cross a theme park with a top chef, you get Monster Hills, a restaurant where the décor and food are designed to be yucky-scary. Diners sit under jellyfish lights, surrounded by giant mushroom plants and other flora oddities. The food entertains: blue pelmeni and green pasta, bread rolls shaped like bloody fingers, and lots of black olive-eyes staring out at you from various dishes.

Roast & Crosby

Coffee from a latte art pro

Sick of chain coffee shops and their under-caffeinated, overpriced drinks? Head over to newly opened Roast & Crosby on Strastnoi Bulvar. Spearheaded by Polina Notik, winner of the 2014 Russian Latte Art Championship, you can bank on your coffee being tasty and beautifully presented. Pair your drink with a slice of carrot cake or an eclair then head for a wander around the center.

Ryobernaya Poly Bones

Ryobernaya

Dig in rib joint

This casual eatery specializes in slow-cooked ribs — lamb, pork and beef ribs all come with a crisp baked potato and sauce of your choosing. Eating with your hands is encouraged, and a selection of imported beers are the perfect accompaniment. Soups, burgers and noodles are also available. The interior, a mix of Cath Kidston florals and western saloon, is as fun as the food. Perfect for large parties, hungry families and messy eaters.

Mestechko

Mestechko

Divine kosher restaurant

Nestled underground in a series of finely decorated rooms, Mestechko is the perfect choice for those seeking quality Israeli food including the most delicious hummus in Moscow. You can go Russian with pelmeni and vareniki from the seasonal menu. A range of fruit teas perfectly complement the cuisine. Prices are high, but the food is outstanding. Closed Fridays and Saturdays.
