

Russian Military Begins Baltic Fleet Reinspection After Officer Purge

By The Moscow Times

July 19, 2016

A⊠special military commission has begun its re-inspection of the Baltic⊠Fleet after its entire senior command was fired⊠in late June, the⊠TASS news agency⊠reported Tuesday.

The re-inspection ■ will check "progress in eliminating shortcomings" in the fleet ■ which were revealed during a month-long Defense Ministry inspection ■ last month, TASS reported.

The ministry⊠dismissed the fleet's entire senior and mid-level command after the⊠initial inspection, including fleet commander Vice Admiral Viktor⊠Kravchuk. Observers have tied the dismissals to incompetence and⊠corruption, including cover-ups and misuse of funds. The purge was⊠the largest mass-firings of naval officers since the Stalin era.

The Baltic FleetBhas come under renewed focus from Western officials' concernedBabout a perceived Russian military threat in the region.
