

Poverty and Rising Prices Most Acute Problems for Russians - Poll

August 02, 2016

The majority of Russians (70 percent) consider inflation and ⊠rising prices to be their most acute problems, the Interfax news agency ⊠reported Tuesday, citing a poll by the ROMIR research group. **⊠⊠

Some 66 percent of respondents said they are worried about poverty ⊠and low wages and 41 percent named ⊠unemployment as a major problem, ROMIR revealed. ⊠⊠

More Russians are also concerned about the problem of corruption (36 ☑percent), compared to 30 percent in 2014.

The⊠⊠Russian economy plunged into a deep crisis in 2014 following Western⊠ sanctions imposed on the country over its role in the Ukraine crisis ⊠and falling global prices for crude oil.

Russians saw their real wages fall sharply amid skyrocketing ■inflation and several million people were pushed below ■the poverty line last year. **■

In the first quarter of 2016, the poverty rate in Russia reached 15.7 ■percent, according to official statistics. ■ A recent poll by Moscow's Higher School of Economics (HSE) revealed ■ that more than 40 percent of Russian households struggle to buy food or clothes.

The ROMIR poll was conducted among 1,500 people in all Russian federal ■districts, Interfax reported.

Original url:

https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2016/08/02/russians-consider-poverty-rising-prices-most-acute-problems-a54831