

Bon Appetit! Russian Ex-Convicts Share Recipes From Prison on Instagram

Russian prisoners of conscience share their favorite jailhouse dishes

By Eva Hartog

August 25, 2016

Russidit / Instagram

Andrei Barabanov spent almost four years in prison — plenty of time to get familiar with the menu, you would think.

Barabanov was among the tens of thousands of Russians who gathered on Bolotnaya Ploshchad on May 6 2012 to protest mass electoral fraud on the eve of Vladimir Putin's third presidency.

Like dozens of other protesters, he was detained and later harshly sentenced on charges of “participating in a mass riot” and “using violence against the police.” The Kremlin’s uncompromising crackdown was repeatedly denounced by human rights monitors as being politically motivated.

In a month-long campaign for the human rights organization RusSidyashchaya, Barabanov reminisces about his time behind bars by publishing a prison recipe on Instagram every day.

Unsurprisingly, the Russian prisoner's diet can hardly be called luxurious. Before he was locked up, Barabanov was already suffering from stomach problems. His time in prison made his physical condition “much worse,” he told The Moscow Times in written comments. Nevertheless, his project is a positive one.

“We wanted to show what prisoners are being fed in canteens,” Barabanov said. “And prove people don't always live under hellish conditions.”

The recipes are inspired by Barabanov's own experience and that of fellow former inmates. There are also plans to collect the recipes into a book once the project finishes, he said.

“My favorites were the fish soup and the bean salad,” he added.

The project is still ongoing. Here's a translation of four of the posts so far:

1. Prisoners’ Nutella

Recipe by Alexander Margolin, Bolotnaya detainee.

Time behind bars: 4 years and 3 months.

Embed:

Фото опубликовано Фонд "Русь Сидящая" (@russidit) Авг 18 2016 в 9:38 PDT

Ingredients: 400 grams of “Yubileinoe” digestive cookies or more primitive analogue; 3 teaspoons of cocoa powder; 1 cup of milk; 150 grams of butter; nuts; half a tin of condensed milk.

1. Heat up a bowl by placing in boiling water. Place the butter in the bowl. Be patient. After several minutes the steam bath will turn the butter into a greasy slush.
2. Crush the biscuits and nuts. Add the crumble mix to the greasy slush.
3. Stir carefully.

4. Pour in the hot milk and condensed milk, and then add the cocoa powder.
5. Carefully continue stirring until the mix takes on a pleasant consistency.
6. Leave the container in a cool place.
7. Spread on bread.

2. Happy Holidays

“Festive canape” with moonshine by Andrei Barabanov. Bolotnaya detainee.

Time behind bars: 3 years, 7 months.

Embed:

Фото опубликовано Фонд "Русь Сидящая" (@russidit) Авг 22 2016 в 10:50 PDT

“I spent New Year's Eve 2014 at Butyrka prison. We began preparing for it several weeks in advance. We ordered scarce products through relatives, stacked up in the prison shop, and picked out potatoes from canteen dishes, so that we could make Russian salad later. We cleaned out our cell, decorated the place with branches from a Christmas tree, put out postcards everywhere.

Then we gave our neighboring cellmates a pack of sugar and they made moonshine out of it. So we thanked them with cigarettes and sweets. We drank the moonshine together with the canapes, just like you see in the photo. We wanted to feel the typical New Year's spirit, and create a special atmosphere. In prison it's very important to have the possibility of distancing yourself just a little from the surrounding reality.”

3. Cheers!

What you need to make moonshine by Ilya Gushchin, Bolotnaya detainee.

Time behind bars 2 years 6 months.

Embed:

Фото опубликовано Фонд "Русь Сидящая" (@russidit) Авг 19 2016 в 10:20 PDT

The objects in this photo are not what they seem.

1. Future valve. Cut the neck of the bottle. It will be used later to remove gases from your moonshine.
2. Multifunctional bags. You can use these to store your homebrew, to cover your moonshine instrument, or as "kontrolki," i.e. small strings to hold the entire structure in place.
3. A tub. Right now it contains Korean carrot salad, but soon the container will be filled with spirit.
4. Simple sugar. This is the main component of fermentation.

5. Batteries. Hot water will be poured into the bottles, and used to later heat up the brew.
6. Yeast. The bread needs to be sprayed with water, and then left to “flower” for a couple of days. This step is not necessary if you can obtain traditional yeast by illegal means.
7. Boiler. For boiling water. If you don't have one, you can disassemble an electric teapot and extract a heating spiral.
8. A bucket. Useful for mixing components.
9. A basin. This is the core of your moonshine-making apparatus.

4. Rise and Shine

Embed:

Фото опубликовано Фонд "Русь Сидящая" (@russidit) Авг 23 2016 в 7:58 PDT

“They didn’t give us porridge in the prison canteen, but an☒incomprehensible gray mass. Instead of butter, they would use☒kombizhir [a butter substitute of animal and vegetable fats popular☒in Soviet times]. I had stomach problems and I felt as if they were☒trying to kill me.

We were often given chaff porridge — it's made out of a mixture☒of ground grains of very low quality (before, it was used to feed☒soldiers.) This porridge was practically tasteless. Prisoners added☒sweetener to it to somehow improve the taste. After the chaff☒porridge, you would almost instantly want to eat. It didn't digest☒well.

So this is why we tried to make our own porridge. On the☒photograph you can see oatmeal with raisins, condensed milk and milk.

To make the porridge, first pour boiling water over the instant☒oatmeal. Then throw the raisins in (or any other dried fruits), cover☒with a lid, wait 10-15 minutes. Pour in the milk and the☒condensed milk."

You can find more photos and recipes here.

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2016/08/25/bon-appetit-four-recipes-from-a-russian-prison-a55114>