Russia's $\mathbf{x}$ Olympic medalists from this summer's Games in Brazil's Rio de Janerio are to receive $\mathbf{x}$ free luxury cars from BMW, the Interfax news agency reported Thursday.

The cars were transported to the Kremlin, where athletes picked up the keys at a special ceremony.

Gold medalists will receive an X6 model BMW, silver medalists willvreceive an X4, and bronze medalists will drive away with an X3 model, the BMW区Group Russia announced.

All of the cars were 凹assembled in Russia, said t he Director of Russia'sखOlympian Support Fund, Alexander Katushev.
Russian medalists will also receive cash prizes, ranging from fourखmillion rubles ( $$ 60,000$ ) for a gold medal, 2.7 million ( $$ 40,000$ ) for a silverखand 1.7 million $($ 26,000)$ for a bronze, Interfax reported.

Russia finished fourth in the Olympic medal table this year, despitexmany athletes being banned from competing after reports of an extensive $\mathbf{\boxtimes}$ state-run doping program in Russian sport.
