

Kremlin Pays Gazprom to Cut Belarusian Gas Prices

October 11, 2016

Sergei Porter / Vedomosti

The Kremlin has agreed to pay⊠state-owned energy giant Gazprom $1.3 billion to supply Belarus with⊠cut-price gas, the Kommersant newspaper reported Tuesday.

Minsk will receive lower gas prices in ■ return for canceling a planned price hike for Russian companies ■ transporting oil through the country, the newspaper wrote.

Unnamed⊠sources also claimed that Belarus had pledged to enter into a common⊠energy market as part of the deal, which will see their gas bill⊠slashed by approximately 30 percent.

The payments will be spread across the ■next two years, with the Gazprom set to receive $402 million before ■the end of 2016. ■

Long-running price negotiations on gas

■have put an increased strain on Belarus and Russia's traditionally close ties in recent months. When Moscow announced in September that it⊠would reduce Belarus' oil supply over allegedly unpaid bills, President Lukashenko claimed that⊠the Kremlin wished to "put pressure" on Minsk to agree to higher ■gas tariffs.

Original url:

https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2016/10/11/kremlin-pays-gazprom-to-cut-belarusian-gas-prices-a55676