Russian Presidential Spokesman Dmitry Peskov has said that Vladimir Putin and U.S. President Donald Trump may meet before this year's G20 summit in July.

During a daily press briefing with journalists at the Kremlin, Peskov said that a meeting between Putin and Trump would take place, "In all likelihood."

Peskov additionally said that a Jan. 28 telephone conversation between the two presidents had been "constructive," and had covered topics including international discussions and security and counter terrorism.

The G20 summit is scheduled to take place July 7-8 in Hamburg.
