Opposition politician and staunch Putin critic Alexei Navalny was doused in bright green dye during a campaign event in the eastern Russian town of Barnaul Monday morning.

Photos taken by a news reporter show Navalny covered with the green dye, a common antiseptic sold for a fraction of a U.S. dollar at pharmacies throughout Russia.

“It’s either Avatar, or the Mask, or Shrek,” Navalny commented jokingly on his blog after the incident. “This is a strange presumption on the Kremlin’s part: if they pour Brilliant Green over me, I will stop campaigning and organizing rallies.”
