

Russian Foreign Ministry Abolishes Human Rights Post

April 25, 2017

A.Gordyeva / Vedomosti

Russia's Foreign Ministry is set to abolish the post of ~~the~~ human rights commissioner.

The position will be formally dissolved when the current ~~the~~ commissioner, Konstantin Dolgov, moves to his new post within the presidential ~~the~~ administration, Russia's Izvestia newspaper reported Tuesday.

An unnamed source told the outlet that the position was simply "no longer needed."

Related article: Human Rights Watch Slams Russian Schools as Refugee Children Expelled

The government announced April 21 that Dolgov would be taking up a new role in the Office of Public Projects, overseeing communication between the Public Chamber, the ~~the~~ Human Rights Council, and the Office of the Commissioner for Human Rights and Children's ~~the~~ Rights.

The commissioner's responsibilities will be transferred to the Department for Humanitarian Cooperation and Human Rights (DHHR), led by Anatoly Viktorov.

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2017/04/25/russian-foreign-ministry-abolishes-human-rights-post-a-57809>