

News and Openings

What's new around town.

May 17, 2017

HHLVK / FACEBOOK

HHLVK

Designer clothing in a squat

HHLVK, a multi-brand store has moved into a new, larger space within the same squat-like Khokhlovka cluster that gave the store its name. Browse rooms of exposed brick or whitewashed walls and pick up a garment or two. Apart from popular women's brands like Totti, there's a men's corner with architectural prints by G(end)er and a children's corner with hoodies by Panda Loves You.

Burger & Fries

Fast food at a meat store

Miratorg, one of Russia's leading meat producers, has launched this chain of burger cafes, located at their select stores – there are currently four of them in Moscow. Burger & Fries offers eight different burgers from 205 rubles ($3.50). There's also strip-loin steak (349 rubles for 150 grams), hot dogs and salads. Miratorg plans to significantly expand the chain in the future.

Steak It Easy

Two new locations

Steak It Easy is a new chain by the Vasilchuk brothers, famous for the ubiquitous Chaikhona #1. The chef is Australian Sebbie Kenyon, who is known for working with unorthodox meat cuts – try his excellent picanha or skirt steaks (600 rubles/$10.30) with mashed potatoes and truffle oil. There's also a wide selection of beef, lamb, and chicken burgers (from 300 rubles) and wine on tap (from 90 rubles per 100 ml). +7 (495) 544 5377

Chefshows by Novikov

Too cool for school

The culinary school Chefshows by Novikov has opened a cafe on the premises offering all-day breakfasts. You can watch the students at work while waiting for your waffles, eggs, or porridge (from 290 rubles/$5). If you are in a mood for a proper meal there's carp with sour cream sauce (750 rubles) or quinoa salad with mushrooms and spinach (550 rubles).

Original url: <https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2017/05/17/news-and-a58012>