The Moscow Times
30 YEARS
INDEPENDENT NEWS FROM RUSSIA

African Dust Storm Turns Southern Russia Yellow

March 23, 2018

Instagram @evgeny__volkov

Dust from the African Sahara has swept over southern Russia, turning the streets and mountain slopes of Krasnodar region a hazy yellow color.

Embed:

Публикация от Питерская Ксения (@8ksy_ksy8) 23 Мар 2018 в 2:27 PDT

Andrei Bondar, the head of the regional weather center, said the sandstorms that originated in North Africa and passed through Crete on the Mediterranean posed no health hazards.

Embed:

Публикация от Konstantinov Konstantin (@kkkonstantinov) 23 Мар 2018 в 12:10 PDT

“The dust particles condensed in the atmosphere and a colored rain fell,” Interfax quoted Andrei Bondar as saying.

Embed:

Публикация от MarcusRid (@marcusrid) 23 Мар 2018 в 2:57 PDT

Residents took to social media to share images of yellow snow and rain, many of them snapping pictures from the famous Roza Khutor ski resort in Sochi.

Embed:

Публикация от Михаил (@hakkisnow) 23 Мар 2018 в 2:37 PDT

The weather event follows reports earlier on Friday of yellow and pink snow in Ukraine.

Embed:

Публикация от Ekaterina Titova (@tes_78) 23 Мар 2018 в 1:33 PDT

Photographers revelled in the natural sepia-like tones that covered the mountainous landscapes of the region.

Embed:

Публикация от Sergey Vlasov (@sergey__vlasoff) 23 Мар 2018 в 4:34 PDT

Weather forecasters did not specify when the snow would return back to its normal color.

Embed:

Публикация от Евгений Волков (@evgeny__volkov) 23 Мар 2018 в 3:39 PDT

Original url: https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2018/03/23/african-dust-storm-turns-southern-russia-yellow-a60922