The Moscow Times
30 YEARS
INDEPENDENT NEWS FROM RUSSIA

Russia Now Has 2 Woman Billionaires, Forbes Says

February 21, 2019

Tatiana Bakalchuk RBC / TASS

It's no longer lonely at the top for Yelena Baturina, Russia's richest woman and the wife of former Moscow mayor Yury Luzhkov.

Forbes Russia said Tatiana Bakalchuk, the co-founder and owner of popular private online retailer Wildberries, joined its women billionaires list on Thursday.

The business magazine now estimates Bakalchuk's net worth at more than $1 billion based on Wildberries' dizzying success that made it the fourth most expensive Russian online company in 2019.

The news inches Bakalchuk closer to Baturina, who Forbes said held a fortune of $1.2 billion in 2018.

Baturina, 55, served as the president of the Inteco Management construction company until her husband's departure as mayor of Moscow in 2010, when she sold the company and moved abroad. She has since embarked on a number of development projects.

Bakalchuk, 43, who co-founded Wildberries in 2004 as a budget online retailer for busy mothers, still ranks as the 165th richest Russian among both genders.

Original url:
https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2019/02/21/russia-now-has-2-woman-billionaires-forbes-says-a64584