

British Ship Shadows Russian Naval Task Force in English Channel

By Reuters

March 06, 2019

The frigate Admiral Gorshkov Ilya Kurganov / TASS

A British destroyer is shadowing a Russian naval task group as it passes the English coast, the Ministry of Defense said on Wednesday.

HMS Defender was called upon to sail over the weekend and keep watch on the frigate Admiral Gorshkov and three auxiliary ships as they neared U.K. territorial waters off Scotland.

It will continue to escort the Russian group this week as it passes through the English Channel, the ministry said.

Related article: Drunk Russian Sailor Rips Gaping Hole in South Korean Bridge

"We will continue to work with our allies to shadow Russian ships passing through international waters close to our shores, to ensure the Russian navy follows the correct protocol on its journey," Armed Forces minister Mark Lancaster added in a statement.

Royal Navy ships routinely shadow Russian warships through the English Channel. Last May, Royal Navy head, First Sea Lord Admiral Philip Jones, said in a speech that Britain was facing "significantly emboldened Russian naval activity, which is continually testing our resolve."

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2019/03/06/british-ship-shadows-russian-naval-task-force-in-english-channel-a64723>