Russia's Foreign Ministry said on Monday it was seriously concerned by what it described as attempts by some opposition forces in Serbia to provoke violence during protests in Belgrade over the weekend.

Thousands of anti-government protesters staged a rally outside President Aleksandar Vucic's residence on Sunday to press their demands for greater media freedom and free and fair elections, a day after they briefly broke into the state television building.

Russia's Foreign Ministry noted what it called the "measured and balanced" reaction to the protests by authorities in Serbia, a close ally of Russia.
