

Russian Officials Snap Back at Ukrainian Threat to Bring Tanks to Moscow

April 05, 2019

Vladimir Omelyan Serg Glovny / ZUMA / TASS

Russian officials took to social media with posts mocking a Ukrainian minister's pledge to storm Moscow with tanks.

Ukrainian Infrastructure Minister Volodymyr Omelyan wrote on Facebook Thursday that Ukrainian tanks will “eventually” arrive in the Russian capital alongside its allies. His post was made in response to an invitation from Moscow to discuss Ukraine's membership in a Eurasian Union unified transport zone.

Related article: Moscow Says It Has Nothing to Do With Hundreds of Tanks in Eastern Ukraine

“Dear comrade, the Moscow you'll be in ‘with allies in tanks’ is located in Idaho. So be my guest,” said Maria Zakharova, the Russian Foreign Ministry spokeswoman.

Senator Alexei Pushkov crowed that “Only Adolf Hitler seriously planned to go to Moscow in a tank, but at least he had many tanks and a plan of action.”

“Kiev’s chatterboxes have neither,” he tweeted. “They can only drive into a dug-up hole.”

Ruslan Balbek, a State Duma lawmaker from Crimea, also mocked the comment, saying that “we’ve seen these Ukrainian ‘heroes’ already,” the state-run RIA Novosti news outlet reported.

“Some are hiding in Kiev, while the others are detained in Russia. Neither have ultimately reached Moscow.”

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2019/04/05/russian-officials-snap-back-at-ukrainian-minister-threatening-to-bring-tanks-to-moscow-a65116>