

Putin, Cheburashka and Alyonka: Here's How Russian Social Media Used FaceApp

July 19, 2019

RussianMemesLtd / Twitter

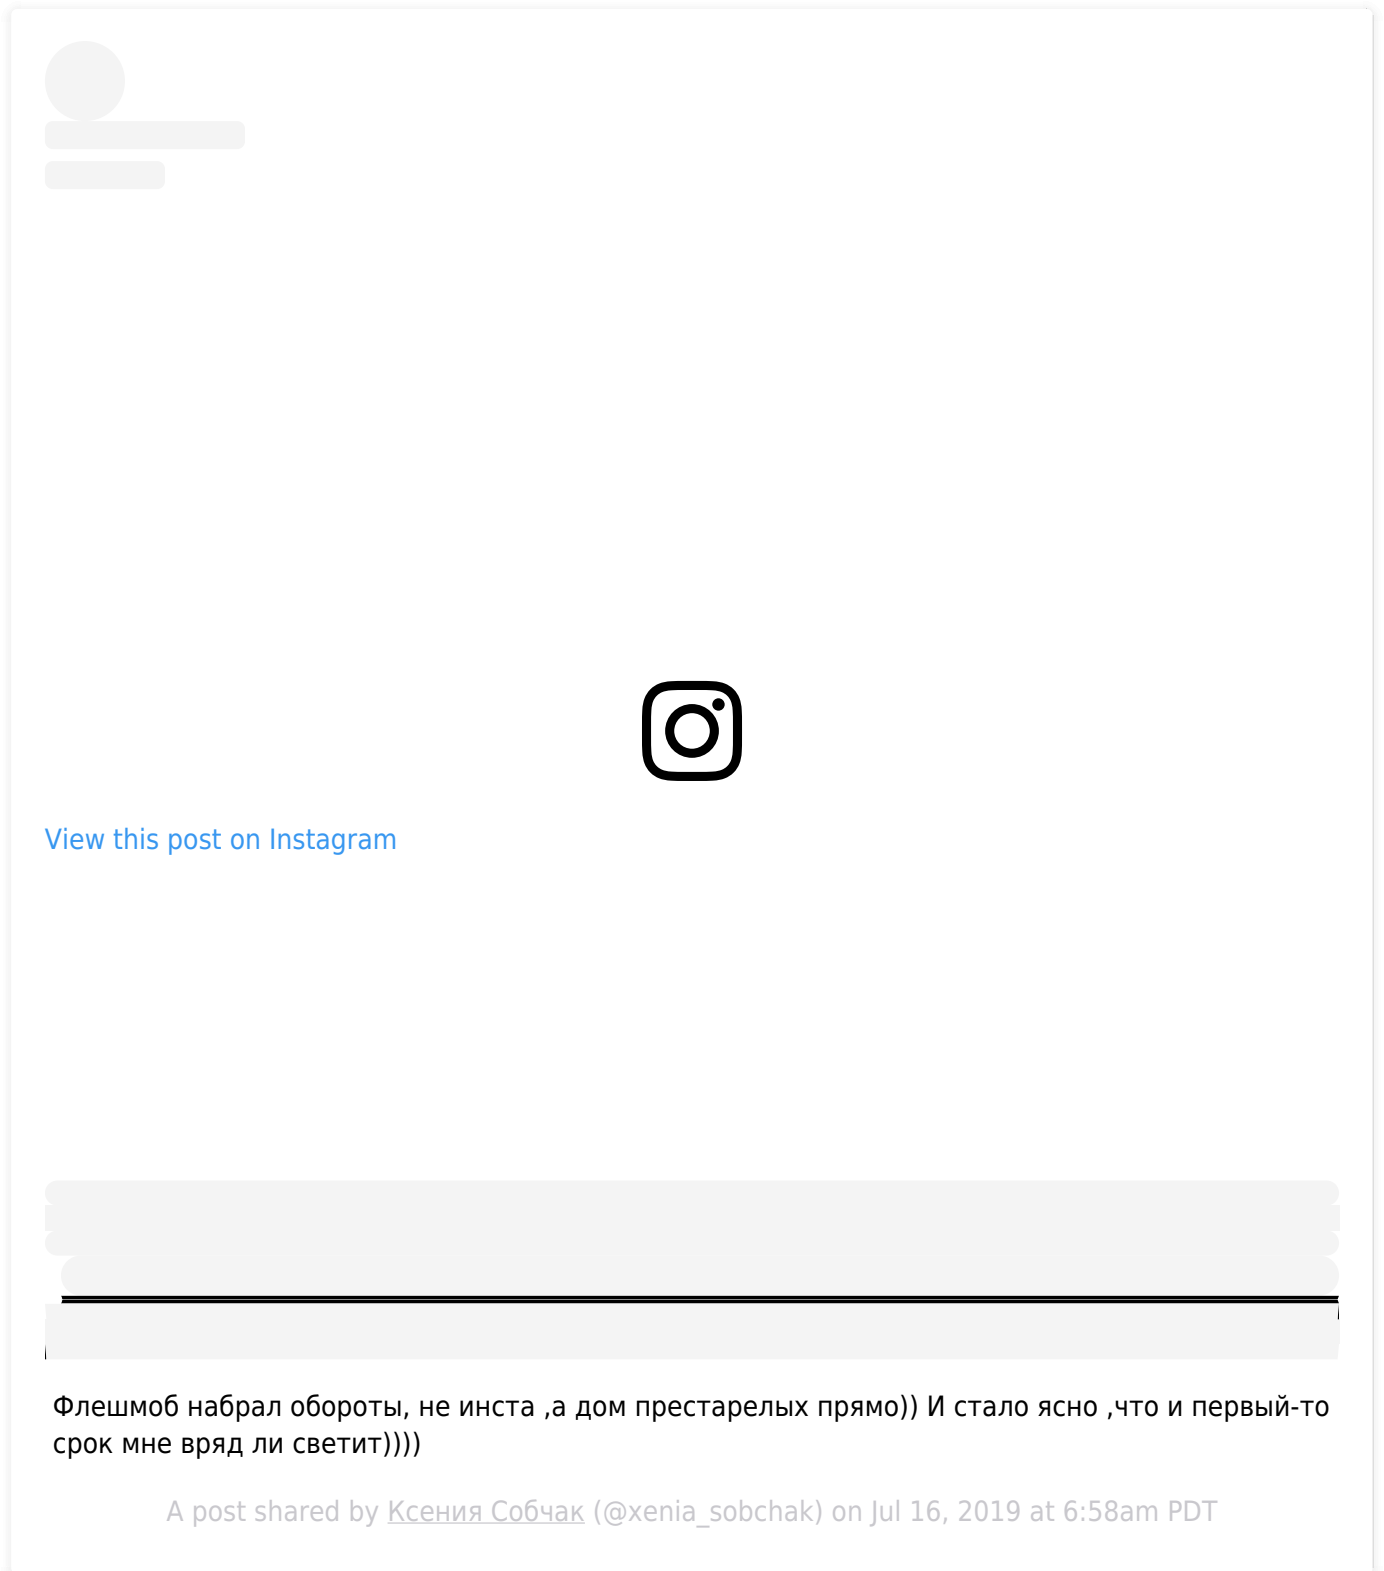

FaceApp, a face-editing photo app created by a Russian tech company called Wireless Lab, has gone viral after social media users from all over the world took the #FaceAppChallenge.

Despite western experts' security concerns regarding personal data, people continue to share their old-age photos and make it with famous politicians, singers, cartoons characters and popular advertisement faces. Currently, it is one of the most downloaded apps across the globe and the most downloaded in Russia.

Here are our favorite images:

What an endless presidential term looks like:

Embed:

A bit of imagination and new technologies finds unexpected similarities between popular characters:

Embed:

pic.twitter.com/MjLifVsU6z

— Russian Memes United (@RussianMemesLtd) July 18, 2019

Time spares no one, even Russia's iconic "Alyonka" chocolate girl.

Embed:

pic.twitter.com/RuDqRAqgzo

— Tom Kiehn (@IRtjk) July 17, 2019

The app was a hit on Russian television.

Embed:

Meanwhile, on #Russia's state TV. #FaceApp pic.twitter.com/ckyyGjPf53

— Julia Davis (@JuliaDavisNews) July 18, 2019

- Honey, where are you?
- At my grandma's
- Send a photo
- ...

Embed:

фейсапп зашёл слишком далеко pic.twitter.com/CSejUbZSpf

— X dr. straightedge X (@Natella_Nut) July 18, 2019

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2019/07/19/putin-cheburashka-alyonka-heres-how-russian-social-media-used-faceapp-a66488>