Russian Artist Takes to Apartment Wall to Highlight Country's Social Issues

July 19, 2019

Arseniy, an artist from the Russian city of Samara, has recently made waves on social media with a series of photographs made against the backdrop of an abandoned five-story building. The project is called "1m²" and addresses social issues and experiences encountered by normal Russians. The performances include showing a simple factory worker's dinner, dreams about being able to take a vacation to the sea and the difficulties that people with disabilities encounter when living in houses without elevators. Here are some of our favorites:
