Welcome to the Russian Dacha

By Héloïse Bargain

July 19, 2019

At the dacha, a traditional Russian summer house, home appliances are pretty basic. You can cook on the woodstove, draw water from a well or even cross the garden to go to the toilet... But the dacha is also a safe haven for Russians who live in cities — they rush here after work every Friday for some peace and relaxation. Spend one evening with three generations of women at a traditional Russian dacha north of Moscow. Their main occupation? Doing nothing!
