

Siberian Ammo Depot Explosions Killed 1 and Wounded 32, Officials Say

August 12, 2019

Olga Khalmanova / Screenshot OSA TV

A series of explosions that rocked a Russian ammo depot in Siberia has injured a total of 32 people over the past week in addition to one death, authorities have said.

Explosions ripped through the site last Monday, killing one, injuring 13 and prompting the authorities to evacuate 16,000 residents from nearby areas in the Krasnoyarsk region. A senior Russian Defense Ministry official named “human error” as the preliminary cause before the second set of blasts, said to be caused by a lightning strike, injured five more people Friday.

Embed:

Video of spectacular shockwave from explosion at military unit in Krasnoyarsk Krai of Russia pic.twitter.com/oyeg3hIb5F

— Liveuamap (@Liveuamap) August 5, 2019

“The overall number of victims from ammunition explosions at the military unit totals 33 people,” the Krasnoyarsk region’s health administration said Monday.

Related article: ‘Human Error’ Likely Caused Siberian Arms Depot Blast, Official Says

Three victims remain hospitalized at the Achinsk district hospital, it added.

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2019/08/12/siberian-ammo-depot-explosions-killed-1-and-wounded-32-officials-say-a66812>