

Moscow ‘Mass Unrest’ Defendants Kept in Pre-Trial Detention Despite Protests, Appeals

August 15, 2019

Yegor Zhukov thevyska.ru

A Moscow court has ruled to keep in custody pending trial six of the 14 defendants accused of “mass unrest” over recent election protests that have rocked Russia’s capital.

At least 14 people face up to eight years behind bars for what the authorities call participating in “mass riots” during unauthorized protests in support of rejected opposition candidates on July 27. The activists — among them popular YouTuber and political science student Yegor Zhukov — have received an outpouring of support from ordinary Russians and pop culture figures.

Related article: Moscow Student’s ‘Mass Unrest’ Detention Sparks Wave of Support

The Moscow City Court rejected appeals against the arrests of Zhukov and fellow defendant

Kirill Zhukov, the Mediazona news website reported Thursday.

Authorities suspect Yegor Zhukov of “gesturing” to direct the crowd’s movements during the July 27 protest. Kirill Zhukov, who has no relation to Yegor, is accused of lifting a police helmet visor.

The court later rejected the appeals of Alexei Minyaylo, who maintains he had been detained before arriving at the demonstration, and Daniil Konon, who is accused of paralyzing traffic.

On Wednesday, the court rejected the appeals of four other defendants: Ivan Podkopayev, Sergei Abanichev, Samariddin Radzhabov and Vladislav Barabanov, Mediazona reported.

Embed:

Egor Zhukov tells court – I don’t know whether I will be freed – but Russia will be free pic.twitter.com/etxaDsZEiz

— Sarah Rainsford (@sarahrainsford) August 15, 2019

“I’m 21 years old and my life has been going uphill. I’ve never been involved in any criminal activity,” Radzhabov had said in court.

Thirteen defendants have denied the charges. Valery Kostenok, 20, was reported to be the only person to have pleaded guilty.

Related article: ‘A Number the Authorities Can’t Ignore’: Moscow Opposition Sees Record Protest Turnout Despite Crackdowns

The judge on Thursday rejected 612 appeals for Yegor Zhukov to be released on bail, half of them signed by professors and staffers of the Higher School of Economics (HSE) which he attends.

Popular rapper Oxxxymiron had arrived at the Moscow City Court to support the HSE student early Thursday, but was refused entry into the crowded courtroom.

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2019/08/15/moscow-mass-unrest-defendants-kept-in-pre-trial-detention-despite-protests-appeals-a66879>