Russian Youth Fights for Climate in Siberia

By Héloïse Bargain

December 13, 2019

Teenage climate activist Greta Thunberg has been named Person of the Year by Time magazine — and her influence has crossed over Russia's borders. Russians have staged climate rallies as part of Thunberg's Fridays For Future movement in cities across the country, including in Siberia, where the thermometer can easily fall below minus 20 degrees Celsius. We spoke with Siberia's eco-activists about their choices, their concerns and the challenges they face.
