

In Photos: Coronavirus Transforms the Face of Moscow

March 18, 2020

With the coronavirus pandemic showing few signs of slowing down around the world, Russia is taking increasingly drastic measures to limit the highly contagious virus' spread within its borders. In Moscow, the city has put an end to large gatherings like sporting matches and cultural performances and has closed down the city's schools and universities. With a growing number of people are encouraged to work from home and practice social distancing as well, the coronavirus is leaving a major impact on everyday life for Muscovites. Here's a look at Russia's capital in the age of coronavirus:

Newlyweds in Zaryadye Park celebrate their big day in the age of social distancing. Artyom Zhitnev / TASS

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2020/03/18/in-photos-coronavirus-transforms-moscow-into-a-ghost-town-a69664>