

Russia and Turkey Cut Short Joint Patrol in Syria's Idlib

By Reuters

March 23, 2020

The patrol is meant to cover the M4 highway which links the cities of Aleppo and Latakia. Moawia Atrash / ZUMA / TASS

Russia and Turkey were forced to cut short their second joint patrol in Syria's Idlib region on Monday due to security concerns, the Russian Defence Ministry said in a statement.

The patrol is meant to cover the M4 highway which links the cities of Aleppo and Latakia.

Their first joint patrol was also cut short earlier this month due to what Moscow called "rebel provocations."

Russia and Turkey are trying to uphold a ceasefire agreement in the region.

Original url:

<https://www.themoscowtimes.com/2020/03/23/russia-and-turkey-cut-short-joint-patrol-in-syrias-idlib-a69719>